Since we found only a few cases of quiescent tumours (3/8 neoplasms in 9-year-old Tg.AC mice), we cannot exclude that quiescence is a characteristic of the particular tumour cell line we used. We hypothesize that the only defect of HCT116 cells is that they express low levels of p16^{INK4a}. However, since the transgenic mice used in this study do not carry the p16^{INK4a} deletion (which arises later during tumour progression),
