Police were called to the student's home in Virginia Beach on Thursday, according to The Washington Post. There, the man who had been previously convicted of indecent liberties with a child and was staying at the family's home was arrested. The suspect, who is in his 20s, is not believed to be a threat and is being held on $150,000 bail. Police said they are still investigating the allegations and have not ruled out the possibility that there could be more victims. "We feel like we have more to investigate, more to identify," said Lt. Chris

Burch, a spokesman for Virginia Beach police. A woman who lives at the home told WTVR she was at the house Thursday when her 22-year-old son answered the door and said he was safe. "I'm just so grateful," the mother told the station. "I'm glad he's alive, he's safe." The student, a 17-year-old, disappeared March 17 as he traveled with his parents and girlfriend to a spring break trip in Florida. The teens had all but given up on finding him when his mother saw what she thought was a "guy in a camouflage hat" on the front porch, according to the Post. The b7e8fdf5c8
