Steve Scalise continues to have a “good day” according to his doctors at MedStar Washington Hospital Center. According to Scalise’s doctors, he is in stable condition and they expect to make a final update on his condition later on Sunday. Scalise was shot at an outdoor congressional baseball practice Wednesday in Alexandria, Va. by a gunman who has since been identified by law enforcement as James T. Hodgkinson, a 66-year-old man from Belleville, Illinois. While waiting for @SteveScalise to be airlifted to MedStar for further treatment of his injuries, these patients are in line at @MedStarWHC — Washington Hospital Center (@MedStarWHC) June 14, 2017 “Early this morning, MRIs of Representative Scalise’s right hip and left thigh showed that the bullets have not entered his hip or penetrated the bone,” according to the hospital. “The doctors feel confident that Representative Scalise has a good prognosis and will make a full recovery.” }
