long-wavelength harvestable triplets. The first time-resolved ultrafast spectroscopy study of singlet fission in a photoactive organic semiconductor is presented. On the basis of our findings, we point out a new tailoring strategy allowing to either enhance the population of triplet excitons (triplets) or to promote efficient harvesting of long-wavelength-absorbing triplets. This tailoring is achieved by inducing short-wavelength-excitons-binding-to-quintets (SW-EBQs) within the photoactive layer.
Intriguingly, the size of the binding area is found to be crucial for the triplet exciton yield, suggesting that an optimized SW-EBQ-driven triplet harvesting efficiency might be achieved in the context of molecular-based photovoltaic devices. Our findings open up promising perspectives for efficient organic light-emitting diodes with a high emission yield (blue-to-yellow) or with a long-wavelength emission.Kobayashi Hideo is a Japanese professional shogi player ranked 2-dan. Early life and career
